INTRODUCTION

The European Wave and Tidal Energy Conference (EWTEC) series are international, technical and scientific conferences, focussed on ocean renewable energy and widely respected for their commitment to maintain high standards in the quality of academic and industrial contributions to their proceedings.

EWTEC is well established among renewable energy conferences showing considerable growth since its launch in 1993, with up to 700 delegates from across the globe in attendance.

EWTEC provides a forum where those at the forefront of technology development in the sector meet, interact, present their latest knowledge and debate new ideas and issues pertinent to wave and tidal energy conversion. It thus provides attendees with a perfect forum for knowledge transfer and debate at the cutting edge of marine renewable energy technology.

The conferences are the pre-eminent global pedagogic and scholarly events dealing with wave and tidal energy conversion and provide global focus for all activities in wave and marine current energy conversion technologies, research, development and demonstration.

CONFERENCE DETAILS

The 14th EWTEC conference is being hosted by the University of Plymouth, in the heart of the South West of England.

The region draws from a rich heritage of marine and maritime expertise to maintain its powerful track record as a hub for research and development in offshore renewable energy.

The University of Plymouth's history of excellent coastal and ocean engineering spans decades, and attracts talented scientists to join the ranks in the search for innovative solutions to global engineering challenges - making it the perfect host for EWTEC 2021.

Conference dates

The conference will be held from Sunday 5th – Thursday 9th September 2021.
